Food Price Jump Of 13.8 Per Cent Is Record

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9—The government reported today that retail food prices shot up a record-breaking 13.8 per cent between June 15 and July 15.

The bureau of labor statistics, which measures prices, said the rise was the greatest one-month jump in U. S. history. Its survey was made after food subsidies had ended and while price controls were suspended.

During the last week of July,

food prices declined slightly, the bureau said.

The fastest rises occurred in Chicago, where prices went up 17.9 per cent; Boston, 17.3 and Minneapolis, 17. The slowest among 56 cities surveyed were Mobile, 9.3 per cent; Salt Lake City, 9.7 and Seattle, 10.2.

In the first authoritative government survey of what happened to consumer food prices after the end of subsidies and OPA, the bureau gave this summary:

Meat—led the movement with a 30 per cent rise as prices of livestock in primary markets moved up 20 per cent. Supplies were large. Beef and veal rose 45 per cent, pork 32 per cent, lamb 24 per cent. Some of the greatest increases were 50 per cent for chuck roast, 47 per cent for round steak and rib roast, 30 per cent for pork chops and ham and 40 per cent for veal cutlets. Meat prices on July 15 were 32 per cent higher than a year earlier and 82 per cent above August, 1939.

Chickens—Up 9 per cent.

Fresh and canned fish—Up 7 per cent.

Dairy Products—Rose 21 per cent and were 34 per cent above a year earlier and 92 per cent above August, 1939. Butter rose to over 80 cents per pound, 32 per cent above June. It cost 50 cents a pound in July, 1945. Fluid milk prices were higher by 2½ cents per quart or 15 per cent above June.

Cereals and bakery products—Increased 3 per cent primarily because of higher prices for flour, which went up 9.6 per cent. Corn flakes were up 12.8 per cent, corn meal, 14.8 per cent.

Eggs—Advanced seasonably by 9 per cent.

Fresh and canned fruits and vegetables—Up almost 3 per cent.

Increases of 13 per cent for oranges—eight times the usual seasonal rise—24 per cent for spinach were reported. White potato prices edged upwards but cabbage and onion prices were down by 12 and 16 per cent with large crops. Fats and oils—Rose 9 per cent aslard prices jumped 24 per cent with individual quotations as high as 45 cents per pound. Other shortenings and oleomargarine increased 2 to 4 per cent.

The bureau said that between June 15 and July 15, these retail food prices increases were recorded: Cincinnati, O., 14.3, Cleveland, O., 14.7, Columbus, O., 12.2, Jacksonville, Fla., 13.1, Los Angeles, 10.6.

Food Price Jump Of 13.8 Per Cent Is Record

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The government reported today that retail food prices shot up a record-breaking 13.8 per cent between June 15 and July 15.

The bureau of labor statistics, which measures prices, said the rise was the greatest one-month jump in U. S. history. Its survey was made after food subsidies had ended and while price controls were suspended.

During the last week of July,

food prices declined slightly, the bureau said.

The fastest rises occurred in Chicago, where prices went up 17.9 per cent; Boston, 17.3 and Minneapolis, 17. The slowest among 56 cities surveyed were Mobile, 9.3 per cent; Salt Lake City, 9.7 and Seattle, 10.2.

In the first authoritative government survey of what happened to consumer food prices after the end of subsidies and OPA, the bureau gave this summary:

Meat—Up 30 per cent. Meat prices on July 15 were 32 per cent higher than a year earlier and 82 per cent above August, 1939. Chickens—Up 9 per cent. Fresh and canned fish—Up 7 per cent. Dairy Products—Rose 21 per cent and were 34 per cent above a year earlier and 92 per cent above August, 1939. Butter rose to over 80 cents per pound, 32 per cent above June. It cost 50 cents a pound in July, 1945. Fluid milk prices were higher by 2½ cents per quart or 15 per cent above June.

Cereals and bakery products—Increased 3 per cent primarily because of higher prices for flour, which went up 9.6 per cent. Corn flakes were up 12.8 per cent, corn meal, 14.8 per cent.

Eggs—Advanced seasonably by 9 per cent. Fresh and canned fruits and vegetables—Up almost 3 per cent. Increases of 13 per cent for oranges—eight times the usual seasonal rise—24 per cent for spinach were reported. White potato prices edged upwards but cabbage and onion prices were down by 12 and 16 per cent with large crops.

Fats and oils—Rose 9 per cent as lard prices jumped 24 per cent with individual quotations as high as 45 cents per pound. Other shortening and oleomargarine increased 2 to 4 per cent.

The bureau said that between June 15 and July 15, these retail food prices increases were recorded:

BYRNES BLASTS MOLOTOV TALK ABOUT NEW WAR

U. S. Secretary's Latest Denunciation Sharpest Made Against Russia

(Continued from Page One) ever, it was believed that the official records would be changed to put Yugoslavia back in the Russian bloc, making the vote 15 to 6.

Yugoslavia Confused

In the midst of voting on the rules Yugoslavia raised again her demand that Albania be invited to the peace conference. However, at the suggestion of Byrnes consideration of the Albanian question was put over until after the rules were out of the way.

Nations voting with Russia on the rules question were the Ukraine, White Russia, Poland, Yugoslavia, and Czechoslovakia. The French delegate, Couve de Murville, made a last minute appeal to Russia to drop her opposition to the majority vote provision. Otherwise, he said, the conference had no alternative but to ratify the rules over her objection. "I don't think the world would understand that the conference was able to divide on differences of this nature," said de Murville. "France therefore sends out an urgent appeal to the Soviet delegation to accept the decision reached by the commission."

Refuses To Yield

However, K. M. Kiselev of White Russia promptly repeated the Soviet argument and charged that the majority vote rule was adopted because of "extreme pressure brought to bear" by the United States and Britain.

"History has shown us that errors made at peace conferences are corrected by wars," he said. "We are not here to sow the seeds of the next war."

Molotov had characterized the majority vote plan as an "error which must be rectified."

On the final vote for acceptance of the rules as a whole Poland and Czechoslovakia abstained.

Byrnes takes over today the chairmanship which will then start to rotate among the big five every three days.

The afternoon session will consider inviting Albania to the conference and possibly similar requests on behalf of Cuba, Mexico, Egypt, Iraq and Luxembourg.

ARMY OFFICERS PLEASED BY BIG PLANE FLIGHT

FORT WORTH, Tex., Aug. 9.—Air force officers said today that the "X" for experimental would be removed soon from the designation of the XB-36, world's newest and largest bombing plane.

The XB-36, a six-engined silver giant with a tail as tall as a five-story building, successfully completed its first flight yesterday. Army officials said the test hop "exceeded all expectations."

Although full details were not disclosed, Army spokesmen confirmed that the Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corp. had been given a contract to produce a fleet of the mighty new battleships of the skies. The X designation would be removed, they said, after additional tests.

The plane, capable of flying from San Francisco to Tokyo and back again non stop, circled the field for 38 minutes, then landed safely on the Fort Worth Army air field flight strip.

The new "super-duper" bomber, with a range of 10,000 miles and a bomb capacity of more than 30 tons, completely dwarfs the B-29 Super-Fortress. Posing with a B-29 under its wing before the test flight, the XB-36 resembled a mother hen with one lonely chick.

WIFE UNHAPPY ABOUT FISHING TRIPS BY HUBBY

TOLEDO, O., Aug. 9.—Gerald Traver of Millbury, O., went fishing nearly every day but he always dressed up and never took any fishing equipment with him, his wife testified in her suit for divorce.

And he always came back in the wee hours of the morning—without any fish, she added. "Whenever I asked him where he had been," she said, "he always answered 'fishing'."

The judge granted the divorce in common pleas court here.

PALESTINE PROBLEM AT CRISIS STAGE

Guy Gillette of Iowa that conditions aboard refugee ships in Haifa harbor were similar to those on "slave ships." He denounced closing of Palestine to refugees as "the acme of brutality."

Heavy military preparations by British forces in Palestine against renewed Jewish outbreaks, accompanied by a warning from the underground Irgun Zvai Leumi organization that it had carried out the bombing of the King David hotel and would "do it again."

The British foreign office in London made plain that every effort would be made to halt the mass migration of Jews into Palestine by illegal means. An estimated 15,000 are now en route by underground and another 100,000 are believed waiting their turns.

A spokesman said that representations had been made to France and Italy about halting the underground but with little success. The spokesman said nothing, however, about the major underground route through the U. S. zone of Germany and Austria which is operated with tacit approval of the American army—an approval which appeared to have been withdrawn by McNamara's statement today.

WATER HEARING NEXT THURSDAY

The company's suit is captioned "an action to quiet title, for declaratory judgment, and for injunction."

Following the filing of the injunction suit July 13, 1946, an official notification, served on Mayor Ben H. Gordon, gave the city until Aug. 10 to file an answer.

In its petition the Ohio Water Service Company claims it owns personal property in Circleville and vicinity valued at more than $500,000 and that the court was "utterly without jurisdiction, authority, or power" to enter the order of Feb. 1, 1946 which suspended the Oct. 15, 1945 order and gave the municipality six additional months in which to complete the purchase of the water properties.

Declaring that it was necessary to install additions to the Circleville water system to the value of "many thousands of dollars" the company asks that the order of Oct. 15, 1945 and the writ of possession of July 10, 1946 be "set aside" and that the court "permanently enjoin and restrain" the city from taking or appropriating any of the properties.

Judge Earl D. Parker of the Pike county common pleas court, Waverly, now has under consideration a ruling on the Ohio Water Service Company's motion to quash the writ of possession. Judge Parker took it under advisement following a hearing held July 26 in Circleville. In that hearing the company's attorneys declared that "during the past few days the city actually took physical possession of some of the company's property" and that the company turned over the property "under protest and to avoid a breach of the peace."

The city council, in session Tuesday night, passed two ordinances as emergency measures, creating a three-member Board of Public Utilities empowered to operate the water system and the sewage disposal plant. It was announced that Ervin Leist, now superintendent of the disposal plant, will also manage the water department under the newly created post of manager of public utilities with a salary of $300 a month. The legislation stipulates that Mayor Ben H. Gordon will name the members of the Board of Public Utilities with approval of the council members.

"There Is No Substitute For Fair Dealing"

GOP CHARGES TRUMAN WITH 'DOUBLE TALK'

present fiscal year was running $8,100,000,000 above his forecast of last January, but that the government still would be some $1,900,000,000 in the red for fiscal 1947—even though he has ordered executive agencies to trim their budgets $2,200,000,000 below authorized expenditures.

Legislation Blamed

The President said the budget would have shown a surplus for fiscal 1947 had it not been for passage of legislation not contemplated last January. He set a "substantial budget surplus" as a goal for fiscal 1948.

Brown, setting the GOP theme for the coming congressional election campaign, said:

"Mr. Truman has talked about balanced budgets before, and before him Mr. Roosevelt talked about balanced budgets for many long years, but every result was the same—more deficits and more debt."

Losing Opportunity

"This time with a huge federal income of $35 to $39 billion and with the opportunity to cut down on wartime spending and payrolls, Mr. Truman is losing the most favorable opportunity ever presented to balance the budget. If not now, when will he ever be able to balance the budget? A worried, tax-oppressed, inflation-plagued nation wants to know."

Brown said Mr. Truman is proving to be a bigger peacetime spender than Mr. Roosevelt, charged that the Democratic congress has "disastrously failed in its most favorable opportunity for relieving the oppressed," and said the nation can expect from the Democrats "only higher and higher taxes and more and more spending."

lumber workers represented by AFL and CIO unions. The workers had obtained last Autumn a 15-cents-an-hour wage increase which the wage stabilization board subsequently approved as a pattern on which the industry could seek compensating price relief.

However, in May the companies and unions agreed to another five-cents-an-hour boost. Labor and industry members of the wage stabilization board approved 3 1/2 cents for price relief purposes because of "special circumstances." These members held that a national wage pattern of 18 1/2 cents an hour boost had been established by the big steel strike settlement on Feb. 15. WSB public members disagreed and the case went to Steelman who is required to approve any WSB decision based on "special circumstances."

lumber workers represented by AFL and CIO unions. The workers had obtained last Autumn a 15-cents-an-hour wage increase which the wage stabilization board subsequently approved as a pattern on which the industry could seek compensating price relief.

However, in May the companies and unions agreed to another five-cents-an-hour boost. Labor and industry members of the wage stabilization board approved 3 1/2 cents for price relief purposes because of "special circumstances." These members held that a national wage pattern of 18 1/2 cents an hour boost had been established by the big steel strike settlement on Feb. 15. WSB public members disagreed and the case went to Steelman who is required to approve any WSB decision based on "special circumstances."

LITTLE HOPES FOR HAY FEVER VICTIMS HELD

Sneezing Season Will Start
Shortly; Suggestions
For Relief Made

BY MILT DOLINGER

United Press Staff Correspondent
CLEVELAND, Aug. 9.—The hay fever season officially opens in a few days and sufferers of the disease were told today there is little they can do but face it.

No certain cure for hay fever has emerged in the past 15 years, according to doctors of the Cleveland Allergy Society. They said 85 per cent of cases can be made immune through a series of long treatments, but asserted even this immunity is relative.

Dr. Milton B. Cohen, of the society and a member of the board of trustees of the American allergy fund recently established here, said the only real hope for sneeze sufferers lies in continued research and education.

The savants, however, had some suggestions for persons allergic to pollen-causing hay fever during the season—Aug. 15 to the first frost:

There are immunization treatments. These consist of a series of "shots" of increasing amounts of the pollen to which an individual is allergic. By building up resistance and anti-bodies within his body, the sufferer becomes immune from varied periods. The doctors, said, however, this is no cure.

Reduction of pollen causes should be vigorously carried out, although it was shown that killing weeds does not clear a locality. Pollen can travel for tremendous distances by wind.

Hay fever victims should not expose themselves unduly. The doctors emphasized that no forms of exertion should be employed which might make breathing more rapid and increase the amount of pollen inhaled.

The sufferer should not take long auto rides, and should avoid fresh air in heavily pollenized areas. Mountain tops and seashores are comparatively safe, but nowhere the wind blows can be considered ideal because of the air-borne pollen, the doctors said.

The society advised against relying on pollen counts. The saying "sneezing starts at 15" is just a cliché, the doctors said. Some persons start suffering at a pollen count of two, others at 45.

Pollen count varies throughout the country, Dr. Cohen said. Cleveland, he said, is in the "upper middle class of the pollen group, while the area from St. Louis to Indianapolis is "the 400" of pollen count.

The allergy specialists warned you can't run away from pollen. For example, they said, if you go to the southwest it will only be a short while before tumbleweed or sagebrush replaces ragweed.

The only "safe" thing sufferers can do come next week, according to society's doctors, is to lock themselves in a stuffy room—no fresh air—no pollen—no sneezing.

Touted anti-histamine drugs "are not the answer" to curing hay fever, the society said. And nostrums and patent medicines are useless, it pointed out.

The American allergy fund holds that hay fever is tied up with "behavior of human body cells." It is a problem "no different than that of finding the cause and cure of cancer," according to Dr. Cohen. Hay fever, an allergy, is "hereditary as a tendency" and runs in families, he said.

Present research and long-range education plans by the allergy fund hold bright promise for the future, Dr. Cohen said. He said the problem is now up to social scientists who must go back through family case histories and there possibly find more about hay fever.

Dr. Cohen said that although the asthmatic condition runs in families, it may lie dormant in an individual for a long time. The stronger the tendency, he said, the sooner the sneeze.

Who Have Money

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9—All right, sucker, you can't say Uncle Sam didn't warn you.

And there still are plenty of suckers—according to no less authority than the commerce department.

Americans are advised to look twice—and even a third time—before putting their savings in schemes "guaranteed" to make them rich or richer in less time than it takes to write a check.

Swindlers have been reaping "particularly lush pickings" because of the large amount of money that people have and the shortage of consumer goods on the market. Liquid assets in hands of the public are estimated at $181,000,000,000.

Barnett Watson, of the department's office of small business, reported that swindlers are fleecing Americans at the rates of "many millions of dollars" a year.

He said many of the schemes were of "time-tested effectiveness." He added that some were dressed up with "a new coat of paint," but basically were unchanged.

How can you avoid joining the sucker fraternity? Watson's best advice in short was: "go slow."

Many of the schemes closely resemble legitimate business propositions. But when unusually high profits are offered, be on your guard and check thoroughly.

Watson said many victims had been persuaded by telephone to buy worthless stock in Canadian gold and silver mines. Operating by telephone from a Canadian city, the swindler stays out of reach of the securities and exchange commission.

Among other frauds now flourishing in the United States, Watson listed as the most common:

1. The job racket, aimed particularly at veterans. Applicants for jobs are persuaded to post a cash bond to prove they are "diligent and loyal." Sooner or later, the employer—and the money—disappears.

2. Advance fees obtained supposedly to finance a new business and "establish connections in the field of finance."

3. "Cash deposits" to fly-by-night salesmen for future purchase of automobiles and other scarce goods. (To protect your cash, be sure of the trustworthiness of the salesman.)

4. Fake partnerships—the victim finds there is neither a company nor a partner, after he has been persuaded to put up a few thousand dollars for a partnership.

5. Exclusive distributor rights—an individual buys exclusive rights for a particular item in some territory only to later learn the manufacturer knows nothing about it. (Be sure you are dealing with an authorized representative.)

6. Inheritance fraud schemes—A person is told that he is heir to a large estate and can claim a fortune after paying money for legal expenses.

"The ingenuity of the con man knows no bounds," Watson said. "He plies both the city and the countryside, and he rides high when times are good and the golden dollar is hanging 'out.'"

He laid down these rules to keep from being fleeced:

1. Make certain you understand a contract before signing and obtain a copy.

2. Do not sign a blank form to be filled in later.

3. Consult an expert when in doubt.

4. Do not be high-pressed into a financial venture.

5. Beware of flattery offered as a bait.

6. Insist on references.

7. Obtain full disclosures of facts before investing.

8. Remember you will not get anything of value for nothing.

DUTCH FARMER INVITES PUBLIC TO TAKE CROPS

New Yorker Says Lack of Help And Invading Woodchucks Too Much For Him

WEST NYACK, N. Y., Aug. 9.—Autumn Van Den Heuval is a patient, thrifty Dutch farmer, content to till his five farms, plant the crops and prepare for harvest. But he lost his patience today.

"Come and get it," he invited the public. "Free for the picking—golden sweet corn, ripe blackberries, tasty elderberries."

As housewives and school children streamed through the open farm gates to gather the rich produce, Van Den Heuval explained the reason for his decision.

Foraging woodchucks and hired hands who refused $9 wages for an eight-hour day had forced him to it, he said.

The farmer had advertised for help in the newspapers. He had gone to employment agencies. But only five hired hands showed up to work. One of them, a 63-year-old man, dropped dead in the corn field last Monday.

Van Den Heuval said he needed scores of helpers.

There were 80 acres of ripe sweet corn and two tons of juicy berries ready for harvest. However, the woodchucks were beginning to strip the corn, and they seemed to choose the best ears.

"I don't like to see pictures of starving children and I'm willing to give away what I can't harvest," Van Den Heuval said.

When the grapes ripen in September the offer still will be good. Van Den Heuval said the finest crop of grapes in years would be heavy on the vine.

Earlier this Summer Van Den Heuval gave away 40 tons of cabbage to those who would come and pick it. Two truck loads of the cabbage went to the St. Francis sanatorium for cardiac children at Roslyn.

The mother superior of the sanatorium, Mother Mary of Kevelaer, sent Van Den Heuval a box of candy as a token "of my gratitude for what you did for our poor children."

"That was one of the nicest presents I ever received," Van Den Heuval said.

'SHACKING UP' IN PHILIPPINES CALLED TRAGEDY

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 9.—Moral deterioration of the Philippine people which he termed "a most serious tragedy" was described by E. K. Higdon of Indianapolis at the international convention of the Disciples of Christ, in session here today.

Higdon, executive secretary of the department of Oriental missions for the denomination's United Christian Missionary Society, spoke to 2500 delegates to the convention.

"A shockingly large number of Filipino girls in their teens are 'shacking up' with American soldiers, often with consent of their parents," Higdon said.

He explained this was often the result of economic necessity because it was the only means by which some Filipinos could obtain food, clothing, and medical supplies.

He predicted that this war would result in 100,000 children of mixed parentage in the Philippines, compared to 25,000 after the Spanish-American war.

DUTCH FARMER INVITES PUBLIC TO TAKE CROPS

New Yorker Says Lack of Help And Invading Woodchucks Too Much For Him

WEST NYACK, N. Y., Aug. 9.—Autumn Van Den Heuval is a patient, thrifty Dutch farmer, content to till his five farms, plant the crops and prepare for harvest. But he lost his patience today. "Come and get it," he invited the public. "Free for the picking—golden sweet corn, ripe blackberries, tasty elderberries."

As housewives and school children streamed through the open farm gates to gather the rich produce, Van Den Heuval explained the reason for his decision. Foraging woodchucks and hired hands who refused $9 wages for an eight-hour day had forced him to it, he said.

The farmer had advertised for help in the newspapers. He had gone to employment agencies. But only five hired hands showed up to work. One of them, a 63-year-old man, dropped dead in the corn field last Monday.

Van Den Heuval said he needed scores of helpers. There were 80 acres of ripe sweet corn and two tons of juicy berries ready for harvest. However, the woodchucks were beginning to strip the corn, and they seemed to choose the best ears.

"I don't like to see pictures of starving children and I'm willing to give away what I can't harvest," Van Den Heuval said. When the grapes ripen in September the offer still will be good. Van Den Heuval said the finest crop of grapes in years would be heavy on the vine.

Earlier this summer Van Den Heuval gave away 40 tons of cabbage to those who would come and pick it. Two truck loads of the cabbage went to the St. Francis sanatorium for cardiac children at Roslyn.

The mother superior of the sanatorium, Mother Mary of Kevelaer, sent Van Den Heuval a box of candy as a token "of my gratitude for what you did for our poor children."

"That was one of the nicest presents I ever received," Van Den Heuval said.

'SHACKING UP' IN PHILIPPINES CALLED TRAGEDY

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 9.—Moral deterioration of the Philippine people which he termed "a most serious tragedy" was described by E. K. Higdon of Indianapolis at the international convention of the Disciples of Christ, in session here today.

Higdon, executive secretary of the department of Oriental missions for the denomination's United Christian Missionary Society, spoke to 2500 delegates to the convention.

"A shockingly large number of Filipino girls in their teens are 'shacking up' with American soldiers, often with consent of their parents," Higdon said.

He explained this was often the result of economic necessity because it was the only means by which some Filipinos could obtain food, clothing, and medical supplies.

He predicted that this war would result in 100,000 children of mixed parentage in the Philippines, compared to 25,000 after the Spanish-American war.

JOHN GORDON IS SPEAKER AT ROTARY MEETING

All humans are salesmen and the human factor is the most important aspect of salesmanship, declared John Gordon in an address Thursday to members of the Rotary club following a noon luncheon in the Pickaway Arms.

Gordon, who is manager of the Coca Cola Bottling company in Circleville, exhibited a motion picture to emphasize his remarks.

"All people are salesmen," Gordon asserted. "Some sell merchandise and others sell their services. No one can escape being a salesman. Commodities offered for sale change but human nature does not change. The human mind is today what it always has been. The wind cannot blow your coat off but a smiling sun can make you take it off. Always sell the customer his needs. And don't argue. You may win the argument but lose a sale and a customer."

FEWER ANTIQUES

IT is much harder now to get antiques in Europe than it was before the war, reports a buyer for a great New York department store. Knee-hole desks, breakfast secretaries, sets of good dining-room chairs may still be found, but the finding requires time-consuming search. The ordinary sources are still disorganized, and the buyer must resort to the tactics of the American collector, roaming countryside, picking up a piece here and there. Demand has strengthened, also, from Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

One thing that makes it harder is the destruction of so much good furniture. People who were bombed out need everything and buy where they can.

Two factors make antique furniture desirable. One is the sentiment, the group of cherished associations that grow up around a piece long used by one family. The mother, shining the silver teapot for daughter's wedding, smiles as she thinks of all the weddings it has graced since it came to her great-grandmother as a wedding gift. The father, in time of discouragement, grips the arms of the old mahogany rocker and realizes suddenly that in this same chair his forefathers made hard decisions and came through.

The other factor is the simple fact that good, medium and poor furniture has been made at all times. The cheap is soon broken beyond repair or outmoded beyond desire. The mediocre survives only if it had a sturdy utility. The good pieces, made by the finest craftsmen with loving care, survive. Their lines and workmanship, good in the beginning, are still good and will last. Such pieces are worth looking for and cherishing when obtained.

As for the desire to buy antiques just because they are antiques, it is too superficial to have any relation to real love of beauty or fine function.

NEGLECTED VOTES

FOR a democracy whose people consider that they have a pretty good kind of government on the whole, and pride themselves on having a voice in it, the United States doesn't do much voting.

According to the Gallup Poll, this country is at the bottom of the list of big democracies in percentage of eligible persons going to the polls. A little more than half of the adult citizens voted in the presidential election of 1944. Only one-third voted in the Congressional election of 1942.

Far ahead of the United States record in this respect are Australia, France, England, Canada and Italy.

People who don't exert themselves enough to vote are not likely to be taken very seriously in their objections to the way the country is run. In other parts of the world people have paid dearly for that kind of privilege.

With Jack Gaver Along Broadway

NEW YORK, Aug. 9—August is a dull month around Broadway, so perhaps the boys can be forgiven for straining a bit. For example:

Producer Jules Pfeiffer put on a "Milkman's Matinee" of his successful bad play, "Maid in the Ozarks," at 11 a. m. He said business was virtually capacity. No one can remember a Broadway show ever giving a morning performance. Furthermore Pfeiffer vows that he's going to stage a "breakfast show" one of these mornings, starting it at 4 a. m.

A cafe proprietor, who needs publicity like a bear needs a fur coat, says he's looking for a girl to headline his new show. He wants her to have Ingrid Bergman's eyes, Gene Tierney's nose, Lana Turner's mouth, Maureen O'Hara's hair, Jane Russell's bust, Marie MacDonald's waist line, Esther Williams' hips, Betty Grable's legs, Hedy Lamarr's arms and Ann Sheridan's body line. Apparently it's okay for her to bring her own fee. The proprietor, of course, is Billy Rose, who is probably completely unashamed of himself right this minute.

Friday night up at Yankee stadium six members of the Yankee baseball club and six eminent archers, who are operating as an exploitation group for a new movie, are going to engage in a contest. The Yanks will throw baseballs from home plate in an effort to hit a target at second base. The archers will shoot at the target with arrows. No one has figured out as yet just what this will decide. Certainly it will not answer that burning question as to why the Yanks aren't hitting.

The night club decline that began early this year hasn't been halted by Manhattan's Summer visitors. Actually the business is simply shaking down to its pre-war status when Summers usually were dull. The

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9—The politicians are chuckling at the political implication behind the May scandal case.

The inside story is that Mr. May, chairman of the house military affairs committee, walked into the difficulties with the Mead investigating committee, and that the investigation was not inspired otherwise. As May is a conservative Democrat and Senator Mead of New York has aspirations for the governorship, certain political authorities had circulated the report that the case against May was worked up for purposes of widening the split within Democratic ranks by the liberal side for the purposes of punishing a conservative southerner. If it did not originate in such purposes, it certainly had that political effect. However logical this report may sound to some, the inside story is that the Mead committee membership was making a routine check into all kinds of bookkeeping companies. Some suspicions about the May transaction were uncovered but not made public. Then May brought Dr. Henry Garsson to see Mead to complain about the companies being persecuted by a meddling investigation, which, they contended was holding up preconversion of the companies back to peacetime activities.

The committeemen claim other efforts were made to get them to desist, but they will not identify these efforts beyond the point of saying these came from within the Democratic party.

Despite the imminence of the coming congressional election, the Republicans cooperated with the Democratic members in all ways. The Republican senator Homer Ferguson of Michigan (who does not run again until 1949) has been termed the "bird dog" of the committee. Ferguson and his Republican colleagues were in a position to force Mead to act if he tried to cover up. Perhaps they may have been gleeful at the prospect of roasting a Democrat on the eve of departure for home and election.

Another inner political sidelight is that the Garssons hired as their counsel for the inquiry Wayne Johnson, a well known New York city Democrat.

The evidence carried odors reaching to high heaven, but did not prove conclusively that May ever received any money directly, although it produced testimony indicating money was sent. The committeemen have been authorized to look over the income tax returns of May to supply the missing links, and while these cannot be used as evidence or made public in any way, the committee may get some leads to the links (the law permits Mr. Truman to authorize such looks at the returns.)

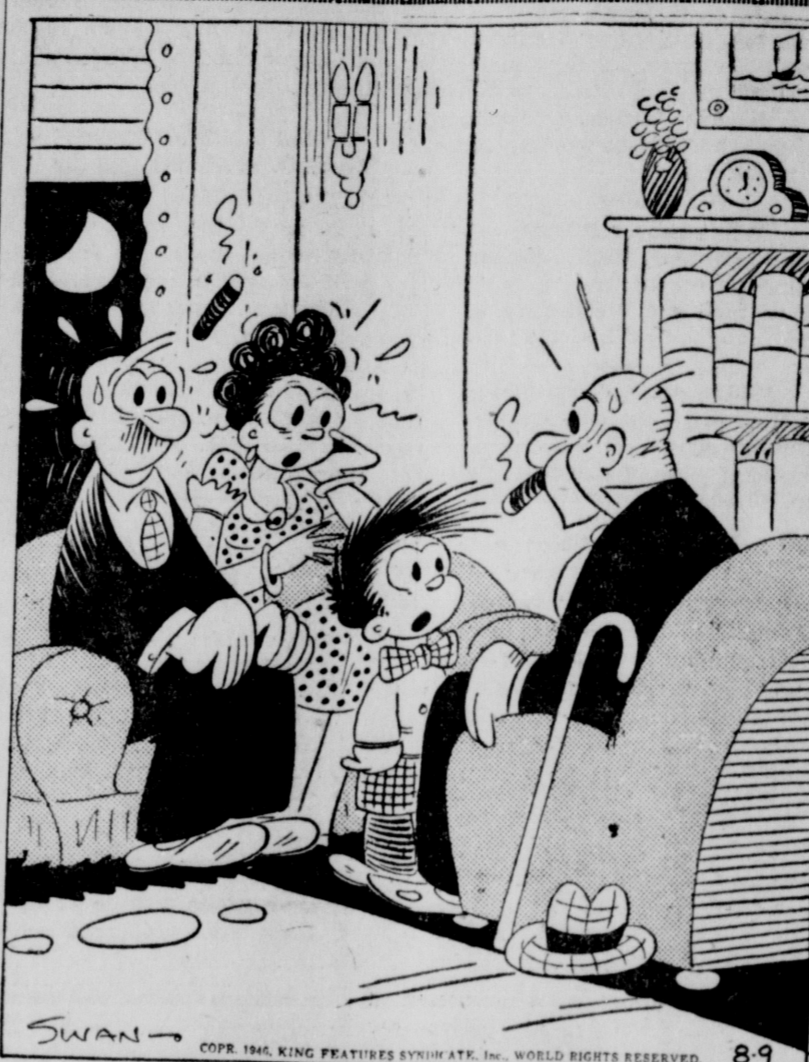

All in all, the newsmen who sat at the press table throughout the inquiry thought the whole case could be put down as a scandal so plainly marked with evidence that no one could cover it on any side, Democratic, Republican, PAC, or any other.

But lo and behold, the case produced a political tale larger than the dog. The Coffee case, following immediately thereafter, concerned a left-leaning Democrat. Rep. John M. Coffee, who received $2,500 from a war contractor for services, is a voter mostly on the leftish side.

Mothering Your Youngster Doesn't Mean Smothering Him

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

THERE is all the difference in the world between mothering and (s)mothering a child, but many well-meaning, and even loving, parents fail to realize it.

It goes without saying that children need gentle care and guidance. But they also need spiritual room to grow. In other words, they need, sometimes, to be let alone.

In all-too-many homes today, the opposite condition prevails. Children are constantly managed and supervised until every impulse toward independence and initiative is smothered and choked off before it has time to develop.

Basic Fear

This tendency to guard the child by planning and arranging its whole life is called over-protection. Basically it is due to fear on the part of the parents but there may be other factors, too, according to Dr. Cecil S. E. Touzel of Texas.

For example, a mother often has the desire to bask in the glory of a super-child. Parents often wish to give the baby a better start in life than they had, or a happier childhood with fewer problems. Parents become fearful that the child will not measure up to the children of friends.

Then, too, parents often become confused about child training because of masses of information and advice which they receive from various sources such as schools, government, and women's clubs.

Proper Instruction

Parents should make an effort to obtain proper instruction concerning the important problems concerned with rearing a child and, particularly, must be taught that over-protection can be definitely harmful for the child's future.

Mothers must be taught that whether the child takes a half an ounce or an ounce of orange juice or gets his first tooth at seven months instead of six months is not a matter of any great consequence.

Every effort must be made to allay the mother's fears concerning the child, and to keep her from magnifying little illnesses and little problems.

Such things as poor appetite, poor sleeping habits, and temper tantrums often will quickly disappear if the parents can just be taught to let the child grow up.

The goal in child rearing is the happy, well-adjusted adult, who can meet life's problems and solve them without too much dependence on others. Over-protection produces grown-ups who have nothing but physical maturity.

This does not mean, of course, that the child's health and welfare are to be neglected but only that parents must learn the golden mean between too much concern and too little.

MOST PLAYERS would really like to know what their customary opponents think of their game. Are you considered conservative, aggressive or changeable? Are you thought of as a fellow who plays "by the book" or as one who is up to all kinds of artifices? Do they know if you are well equipped with knowledge of a bunch of slick stunts to try once in a while? If you can really learn what they think of your game, you can cash in on the knowledge by putting over an occasional fast one.

South was feeling plenty virile after he heard North's positive response to his two bid. So, as soon as the Blackwood response showed North holding the missing ace, he went all the rest of the way to grand slam. He realized that very little more was needed from his partner to make the grand slam, also that he himself had no bidding mechanism to find out about it, once he had hastily Blackwooded instead of bidding 3-Diamonds.

West was a nasty, mean fellow who a few nights before had led a jack from a queen-jack doubleton in trumps and thereby misled a declarer into finessing against his partner for the queen, believing the jack was surely a singleton. That had enabled West to get a trick with the insufficiently guarded queen.

Thinking about that, he decided to try to make this declarer believe he was doing the same thing again—a fandango which could not work unless perchance his partner had the spade queen at least twice guarded; if his partner did not, then no harm could be done anyway. So he led the singleton spade J.

"Ah!" thought South. "Trying to work the same gag on me again." So South this time tried to drop the Q instead of finessing, and got himself set. If he had played just right after the spade A and K, he still could have squeezed East with a club between the spade Q and the diamond J, but this South didn't know his squeezes.

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

FLO SAID, impulsively, "You're so different from what I thought writers were! I never really knew one before. . . . I always imagined they were quite set-up by their success. That they had some tea or cocktail party given for them almost every day, where they talked about their latest book. . . ."

Neil laughed. "Some do. Dodging that sort of thing took quite a bit of my time after 'Joyful Fields'! But I didn't like the book and I wasn't going to talk about it. The story about your mother may be the one! It has everything in it! But I've got to get it in a new perspective. Find the predominant thread in the pattern. I think everyone has one."

Flo recalled these words as she sat by the open window. She realized that she never had thought of her mother apart from her relationship to her and Charlie. She drew the curtains aside and looked down into the dusty, empty street and tried to see her a young girl, going along the walk, down there, going into that "Emporium" across, to buy some gloves or cold cream or something like that, or into that drug store on the corner, to crowd into a booth with other girls and maybe some boys. . . . She shook her head. She simply couldn't imagine it! But she could think, with conviction, "She must have hated a town like this!"

Flo was curious as to how Neil Winslow would begin her research. She had seen her in conversation with the hotel proprietor, asking him questions with what appeared to be no more than casual interest of a motorist driving through the town. And after she left him, she had jotted down some things in a little book she took out of her handbag.

She imparted some of her information to Flo as they started off. "A new president took over at the college three years ago. But the old one, Doctor Rich, still lives here. He'd been president for 35 years so he'd know your mother. . . . But first let's see the place."

There wasn't much to see. In a half-hour they had covered it.

"The college is the principal industry here, I take it," commented Neil. "Runs the year around. It's a Methodist College, did you know? Pretty inhibiting, I'd say. To the girl your mother must have been."

"Yes," agreed Flo. "They came to the college. 'There is the president's house! Your mother told me of the high iron fence and those lions. They were symbols to her, you see.'"

But now Neil Winslow was turning into a humber street. "This is it," she cried. "There's the house!"

Flo cried, "I think I remember it! From that time I came to my grandfather's funeral. She drew a little audible breath. "Mother certainly has come up in the world!"

Neil stopped the car. She sat back in the seat and studied the plain, four-square house before them with a deeply reflective look. But she said nothing of what she was thinking.

They drove back to the hotel. "If you can amuse yourself, I'll go over the notes I've made on what your mother has told me."

At breakfast, the next morning, Neil Winslow suggested they visit the college.

Flo asked, "Wouldn't you rather go alone?"

"No, come along. I'll add your impressions to mine."

The grass of the open quadrangle around which the brick buildings stood was sparse and yellowed. A few trees at each end threw meagre patches of shade in which a few students were gathered, some sitting on wooden benches, some squatted on the ground. Others were going from one building to another; girls and boys, more earnest in their bearing than the usual college student.

It was difficult for Flo to see her mother as one of these. She wondered if Neil Winslow were thinking the same thing.

In the president's office a slender, gray-haired woman in a plain dark blue dress rose from a desk to greet them.

The president was out of town for a few days, she answered to Neil's inquiry. Her glance, as she spoke, kept going to Flo and suddenly she exclaimed, "By any chance, are you Mary Cathcart's daughter?"

Surprised, Flo said, "Yes, I am. I'm Flo Patten."

The older woman caught Flo's hands. "It's strange—you look only a little like her, in features! I think it is something about the way you hold your head. . . . The last time I saw her she was about your age. I am Eliza Condon. Your mother and I were very good friends, once."

She tightened her grasp on Flo's hand as she spoke. Her eyes, young for all the web of tiny wrinkles around them, were misty with feeling. "It's good to see you! I should love a little visit with you later—will you be in town for any time?"

"A few days or so."

"Will you have tea with me this afternoon? Four o'clock? At my home? It's the white house next to the president's."

She added, "Your friend, too, of course!"

"I'd like to come," said Flo, though not very warmly. At the same moment Neil murmured, "Thanks."

"You want to see the college, of course! I'll call one of the seniors. I'm sorry I cannot leave the office."

She pressed a bell as she spoke. "You are motoring through the state?"

Neil Winslow affirmed that. And that it was a pleasant time of the year to motor.

A student came in, a tall, grave-faced girl, in a cotton sweater and skirt. "Four o'clock," reminded Miss Condon as they followed their guide out into the corridor.

"What a marvelous bit of luck to meet her," whispered Neil to Flo. "Flo made a little face. "Tea?"

"A brew of poison, if necessary. She's evidently still very fond of your mother. Didn't you see how her face lighted up? She'll reminisce back over those years. . . ."

Flo frowned. "It's funny—I don't remember my mother ever speaking of her!"

But when four o'clock approached Neil Winslow told Flo that she was not going with her. "You can make some excuse for me. She'd rather have you come alone. She'll talk more freely, if I'm not there."

Eliza Condon was waiting for her on the little porch of the white house.

"Miss Winslow's so sorry, but she had some work. . . ."

But Eliza Condon appeared to have forgotten Neil Winslow's existence. "Come in, my dear. It's quite cool in the parlor—we'll have our tea there." She held Flo's hands as she had in the office. "I am so happy to have you here. . . . Mary's daughter."

A table waited, laid with the tea things. Eliza Condon drew a tea chair close to it. "Take this! It's very comfortable!" She sat down opposite Flo, folded her hands, smiled. "I warn you, I'm going to ask a million questions! Mary? What is she doing?"

"She's very well—she always is! And working terribly hard. She's still with the Muir Company. She practically runs it now. I don't think James Muir makes a decision without consulting her."

"Mary would be in a responsible position such as that," said Eliza Condon warmly, smiling. "We used to talk, your mother and I, about what we were going to be, when we were through college, the way young girls do."

This reminded Flo of the "research" Neil had put on her. "What did my mother want to be?"

Miss Condon laughed. She had a quick, pleasant way of laughing. "A banker, of all things! She was a wizard in mathematics—I suppose she inherited it from her father. Then the June we both graduated she married. . . ."

"You knew my father?" Flo asked this for herself, not Neil.

"Yes." A very faint constraint came into Eliza Condon's voice. "He boarded with my mother the last two years he was here in college, so I knew him very well!" She picked up a teacup, turned it in her fingers. "I was shocked when I heard of his death. I hadn't seen him, of course, for several years, not since your grandfather's funeral, but I thought of him as liking life so—it didn't seem possible he could be—gone!"

(She was in love with him, thought Flo quickly.)

She asked impulsively, "I wish you'd tell me something about my father. What was he like? I was only 12 when he died."

Eliza Condon gave her a quick look and Flo knew she was thinking it was strange her mother had not told her these things she wanted to know.

Then she said, "He was warm-hearted and generous. Some might say he didn't have a very strong character, but. . . ." She lifted her head, looked at Flo with a faint challenge in her eyes. "What seemed weak in him might have been really strength of a sort! He never counted the making of money as important!"

She put the cup down on the table. "You have a sister, haven't you? Younger, isn't she?"

(If my father married her, thought Flo) while she answered, "Yes, Charlie's 19. I'm 24."

"How that adds up my years! I'll pour the tea and then you must tell me about your sister and yourself."

Obligingly Flo chronicled her and Charlie's lives. She finished, "You see, neither of us is as clever as Mother!"

"Perhaps not in the same way," said Eliza Condon quietly. "Do eat more of the sandwiches."

She talked then, of the college, of the new library, the new agricultural department. She evidently had abandoned her million questions. She did not speak of Mary Patten again until Flo was leaving. She went with Flo to the steps. "Thank you for coming, my dear. And give your mother my love!"

It was the message any old friend would send to another but Flo went away, touched by it. Her mother had not cared enough for the friendship to keep it alive! Then it flashed into her mind that she had done this same thing—there was Olive Wilson, who had been her closest friend all through college. Others who had meant a great deal to her for awhile and then nothing.

It was a pleasant side of her character to admit; she quickened her step, as if, by doing so, she could escape it.

Chuck Piper and Nancy Sparks, as played by Larry Brooks and Milti Green, come to the aid of a frightened little schoolteacher who has been victimized through a lonely hearts club to the tune of $500, and wind up with an unexpectedly happy solution during the latest episode of "Passport to Romance," Friday, (7-7:30 p. m., EST) over Mutual. The two young singers intersperse their cupid activities with some hit tunes of the day, as Chuck offers his vocal versions of "Talk Of The Town," and "Blue Skies." Nancy sings "Who Cares," and declares "Cine Help Lovin, Dat Man Of Mine." The two join in the duet "Adventure."

SPOTLIGHT BANDS

Buddy DeVito and "Corky" Corcoran share the spotlight with maestro Harry James on "Spotlight Bands," Friday, over Mutual 8:30-9 p. m., EST, with Buddy taking over the vocal spot for "Seems Like Old Times" and Corky doing one of his inimitable tenor sax solos on "Talk Of The Town." Other tunes for the James ensemble include—"Easy," "Embraceable You," "Keb'lar," "Opus No. 1" and the James version of the Spotlight "tune of the week," "Along With Me."

"Death and Company" is the title of the case solved by Dashiell Hammett's favorite "private eye" on "The Adventures of Sam Spade," Friday, 7 p. m. EST, on ABC network. This time, it is a distraught husband who comes to Sam Spade's dingy San Francisco office to enlist the private detective's aid in finding his wife who has been kidnapped. Sam listens with his usual mixture of sympathy and skepticism, that is alternately the hope and despair of his clients. Sam, as always, takes on the case, but makes a startling departure from his usual procedure. Notorious with the po-

Juvenile Delinquency Increasing Steadily In Pickaway County

LAMB SUGGESTS WAYS TO HALT CRIME INCREASE

Parents Could Help Much
By Cooperation With Officials Judge Says

Tide of juvenile delinquency has been steadily rising in Pickaway county and in most sections of the state, and Judge Sterling M. Lamb, Pickaway county judge of probate and juvenile courts, Friday discussed the situation and suggested methods for preventing and curbing waywardness among young boys and girls.

Declaring that there is a definite upswing in juvenile wrong-doing in Circleville and Pickaway county, Judge Lamb cited that 58 boys and girls already have appeared before him thus far in 1946, a substantial increase over the number brought into the court during the same period last year. He added that reports from 52 of Ohio's 88 counties disclosed that during the month of May alone 1,603 charged with delinquency were haled into juvenile courts. On the basis of the May figure the total for the entire year would be 19,263 as against a total of only 2,003 in 1945.

Of the 58 youngsters who faced charges in Pickaway county since Jan. 1, Judge Lamb said, 31 were boys and 27 girls. Their ages ranged from 8 to 17 years. The average age of the boys was 13.47 years and the girls' average age was 13.52 years.

Judge Lamb declared that one of the best means of preventing juvenile delinquency is for the community to provide adequately equipped and properly supervised playgrounds and recreation centers and that these should be so situated as to provide facilities for children in every section of the city and county.

Asserting that it is useless to send wayward boys and girls to correctional or disciplinary institutions unless each child is first given a thorough examination to determine his or her mental status and capacity, Judge Lamb made it plain that he believes every delinquent youngster should undergo thorough study in the Bureau of Juvenile Research, a state-operated institution in Columbus, before they are committed to the Boys' Industrial School at Lancaster, the Girls' Industrial School at Delaware, or to any other similar institution.

Declaring that he realized that the horrifying wave of robberies, rapes, murders, and other lawlessness among teen-agers and even younger children, which has swept the nation like a tidal wave, is partly a consequence of World War II, Judge Lamb insisted that the situation can be vastly improved and the delinquency substantially reduced—if parents will cooperate properly with officials whose duty it is to enforce the law and administer the law.

But when prevention falls down and crimes are committed, he asserted, immediate examination and classification of the children by the State Bureau of Juvenile Research should be the procedure instead of packing the offenders off to Lancaster or Delaware.

Such examination and classification, Judge Lamb pointed out, would not only be of incalculable benefit to the children but also would relieve crowded conditions in the correctional and disciplinary institutions. No benefit to a certain mental type of child can hope to be accomplished in those institutions, he added, because they lack adequate facilities for the scientific separation and segregation of various mental types of boys and girls.

Judge Lamb pointed out that the children's code commission of Ohio a few years ago recommended examination and classification of juvenile delinquents by the BJR psychologists and psychiatrists as soon as the courts turn the youngsters over to the state, but that the recommendation has not been well followed over the state. The Children's Code Commission was headed by Attorney Hal Griswold, Cleveland, former state welfare director.

Col. Harold Hays, of the BIS at Lancaster, where 863 boys of all types are housed in space that would comfortably accommodate only 500, has stated that immediate classification by the BJR is especially desirable if the state establishes another institution for delinquent boys. It has recently been hinted that the federal government may establish an institution near Marion for older and more incorrigible boys now being committed to the BIS at Lancaster.

Judge Lamb cited that Dr. C. H. Calhoun, head of the BJR, has repeatedly stated that juveniles who are mentally deficient should not be sent to the BIS or the GIS, but rather to special institutions for the feeble-minded. Also that juvenile psychopaths should be segregated in a special institution. According to a recent study, Judge Lamb said, fully 10 per cent of the inmates of the BIS are mentally deficient and another 10 per cent is psychopathic. The percentage in the GIS is believed to be even higher.

Although there is a strong tendency among the general public to blame virtually all juvenile delinquency on the war, Judge Lamb pointed out that the psychopathic or mentally upset child who commits a crime would probably have committed that crime had there been no war, although he readily agreed that psychopaths do become more anti-social in war than in peace time.

Frightful stories such as the murder of an 11-year-old boy by his 11 and 12-year-old companions, the poisoning of a boy by a 15-year-old boy, and the three murders confessed by 17-year-old William Heirens at Chicago, and other stories of violence and robbery on the part of juveniles, Judge Lamb reminded, are told daily in newspapers from coast to coast.

Causes of juvenile delinquency are many, Judge Lamb said, and they include laxity of parental control, breakdown in family morals, employment of both father and mother, more spending of money by children, permitting of children to work instead of attending school, over-crowded and understaffed schools, and toleration of misconduct by children—with the greatest emphasis on lack of parental control.

Juvenile Delinquency Increasing Steadily In Pickaway County

LAMB SUGGESTS WAYS TO HALT CRIME INCREASE

Parents Could Help Much By Cooperation With Officials Judge Says

Tide of juvenile delinquency has been steadily rising in Pickaway county and in most sections of the state, Judge Sterling M. Lamb, Pickaway county judge of probate and juvenile courts, Friday discussed the situation and suggested methods for preventing and curbing waywardness among young boys and girls.

Declaring that there is a definite upswing in juvenile wrong-doing in Circleville and Pickaway county, Judge Lamb cited that 58 boys and girls already have appeared before him thus far in 1946, a substantial increase over the number brought into the court during the same period last year. He added that reports from 52 of Ohio's 88 counties disclosed that during the month of May alone 1,603 charged with delinquency were haled into juvenile courts. On the basis of the May figure the total for the entire year would be 19,263 as against a total of only 2,003 in 1945.

Of the 58 youngsters who faced charges in Pickaway county since Jan. 1, Judge Lamb said, 31 were boys and 27 girls. Their ages ranged from 8 to 17 years. The average age of the boys was 13.47 years and the girls' average age was 13.52 years.

Judge Lamb declared that one of the best means of preventing juvenile delinquency is for the community to provide adequately equipped and properly supervised playgrounds and recreation centers and that these should be so situated as to provide facilities for children in every section of the city and county.

Asserting that it is useless to send wayward boys and girls to correctional or disciplinary institutions unless each child is first given a thorough examination to determine his or her mental status and capacity, Judge Lamb made it plain that he believes every delinquent youngster should undergo thorough study in the Bureau of Juvenile Research, a state-operated institution in Columbus, before they are committed to the Boys' Industrial School at Lancaster, the Girls' Industrial School at Delaware, or to any other similar institution.

Declaring that he realized that the horrifying wave of robberies, rapes, murders, and other lawlessness among teen-agers and even younger children, which has swept the nation like a tidal wave, is partly a consequence of World War II, Judge Lamb insisted that the situation can be vastly improved and the delinquency substantially reduced—if parents will cooperate properly with officials whose duty it is to enforce the law and administer the law.
